Horizon launches films about the Wylfa Newydd Project

Horizon Nuclear Power has launched a series of films with different members of its team giving their first hand insight into key aspects of the Wylfa Newydd Project.

The nine films cover a number of different topics such as Welsh language, the supply chain and jobs and skills. People can view all the films in Welsh and English online at www.horizonnuclearpower.com/consultation.

Horizon is currently consulting on its latest plans for a new nuclear power station on Anglesey, and these films will give people who missed their events an opportunity to hear the team talk about various aspects of the Project.

Richard Foxhall, Stakeholder Relations Manager, said: "We know people like to be kept up to date about our work but aren't always able to visit one of our events. Feedback is really important for our plans so we encourage people to watch our series of films, view the other information on our website and let us have their feedback before the consultation closes."

Horizon's consultation closes on Thursday 24 March so people with comments about topics raised in the films or in the information online can send their feedback to the website above, by email to wylfaenquiries@horizonnuclearpower.com or by post to FREEPOST HORIZON NUCLEAR POWER CONSULTATION.
